Welcome!

Now is the perfect time to establish new habits that will help you to be the healthiest version of yourself. We’re not talking about resolutions you’ll forget about in a week. We’re talking about real, achievable habits that will help you to feel your best.

If you’re ready to live life on your terms, this 21-Day Challenge is just what you need to finally create the daily routine of your dreams. We’ll guide you through simple actions you can make a part of your day. And before you know it, those simple actions will have become rock-solid habits!

Whatever healthy looks like for you, we’re here to support you as you work toward your goals. Let’s get started!

Love,

dōTERRA
Why should I participate in the 21-Day Challenge?

If you want to take charge of your health, life, and happiness, it requires some change. The best way to make lasting change is through micro habits, as they eventually lead to macro changes. Often, we feel overwhelmed if we try changing too much too quickly. But if we start small, it’s amazing how we can train our brains and bodies to do something new, little by little.

If you think about it, we already have thousands of daily habits that are second nature to us. We take showers, lock the door behind us when we leave for work, give our kids a kiss before bed—all without even thinking about it. When we do things repeatedly, the brain builds strong connections with those actions, until eventually we hardly think about them.

This is the idea behind habit stacking. Instead of trying to make a major change and retrain the brain all at once, you instead take advantage of the habits you already have and build on them.

For example, if you want to be better at flossing, you stack that with another habit. Every morning when you turn on the shower and have to wait for the water to warm up, you use those 30 seconds to floss. Then pretty soon, just like turning on the shower every morning, flossing while the shower warms up becomes second nature to you.
All habits work on a loop. We first experience a cue, then we perform the habit, after which we receive some sort of reward. That’s how all habits are formed. However, we’ve become so used to these daily habits that we don’t notice the cues triggering them. The good news is this means you can use specific and deliberate cues to trigger habits you want to adopt, and then reap the rewards.

If you’ve been wanting to make real changes in your life, know that small habits make big, lasting change. So start small. Before you know it, habits you used to dream about will come so naturally you won’t even have to think about them!

How It Works

STEP 1: Let’s Get Started!
Are you ready to change your health? If you want to feel less stressed, lethargic, and weighed down by life, you’ll need to change your habits. We’re giving you three habits to focus on for 21 days. At the end of 21 days, these three habits will give you a new normal—a happier, healthier day, and healthy habits that you don’t even have to think twice about.

Habit 1: Water Intake
Hydration does so much to help the body, yet many of us aren’t getting adequate water every day. By making the conscious decision to increase your water intake, you’ll notice improvement in other areas of health like skin, digestion, focus, energy, and more. And before long, you won’t have to remind yourself to drink more water—it’ll just be a habit.

Habit 2: Daily Movement
Most people have the best intentions when it comes to daily exercise, but busy schedules and family responsibilities often get in the way. Setting aside time to get moving helps us feel our best. Whether you get moving by taking your dog on a walk, straining through a tough workout, or doing a quick yoga session, your body and mind will feel better when you’re done.

Habit 3: Restful Sleep
Restful sleep is one of the most underrated elements of a healthy body. You might find you’ll need to remove distractions and barriers to good sleep if you want to make it a part of your regular routine. By focusing on getting sufficient rest, you’ll find you feel much better during the day and have the energy and motivation to focus on other healthy habits.
How to Habit Stack Your Three Daily Habits

You can use habit stacking to turn these three action items into rock-solid habits. Remember, if you combine these habits with existing habits or cues, you’ll be more likely to actually do them.

Here are some examples of how you can stack them to help you do these three habits every day:

• Do you drink coffee in the morning? While your morning coffee is brewing, drink a glass of water to help you get going on increasing your water intake for the day.

• Do you struggle with getting a workout in your schedule? After you clean up dinner each night, go for a family walk to get your body moving.

• Do you have a hard time removing distractions and falling asleep at night? Before you start your nighttime routine, turn off the WiFi so you create a calm, undistracting environment for sleep.

STEP 2: Choose Your Personal Habit

We hope you’re excited to use the next 21 days to focus on the three habits of water intake, daily movement, and restful sleep. But you don’t have to stop there! Choose one personal habit to focus on over the next 21 days, big or small. If you need ideas, find a habit you’d like to work on in the following list.

My habit:
Habit Ideas

• Find ways to remove processed foods from your diet and replace them with whole foods.
• Make sure surfaces and frequently touched items in your home are cleaned regularly.

STEP 3:
Track Your Habits

Over the next 21 days, as you focus on the three habits of increasing water intake, moving daily, and getting restful sleep (as well as any other habits you want to try), you’ll want to track your progress. After you go through your daily routine, make a quick journal entry at the end of the day to review how things are going. Assess your habits honestly so you can see your progress and adjust if needed. Use the daily tracker on page 36 to help you track your progress.

STEP 4:
Participate in Daily Assignments

Throughout the month, you’ll be working on your three habits every day. To help you along your way, we’ll send you an assignment every day for 21 days. Each assignment is a simple, healthy action that will help take you to the next level as you create the routine of your dreams.

Sign up to receive text reminders for your daily assignments so you never miss a day.

Rest and Manage Stress

Your ability to manage emotions, make decisions, and solve problems depends greatly on your mental and emotional state. If you aren’t getting adequate sleep, your emotions and decision-making abilities can suffer. Likewise, being under too much stress will take a significant toll on your health.

Getting quality, consistent sleep allows both body and mind to rest, ensuring you won’t get overworked and have time to decompress before another day. Also, taking the time to destress with practices like meditation, positive thinking, and self-development can go along way for your mental, emotional, and even physical health.

Tips

Tips for Better Sleep

• Create the optimal sleeping environment. Do your best to ensure your room is dark, not too hot or cold, and quiet.

• Avoid stimulants like alcohol, nicotine, and caffeine during the day, as they can keep you up at night.

• Make sure you have adequate bedding. You might need a new pillow, mattress, or comforter.

• Exercise during the day on a regular schedule. Doing so can help you sleep better at night. (Just don’t exercise too close to bedtime, as this can actually keep you awake.)

• Remove distractions, turning off all screens an hour or two before bed. Instead, try more relaxing activities like reading, meditation, or journaling.

• Consider taking a warm bath or having a cup of unstimulating tea before bed.

• Go to bed and wake up at the same time every night and morning to set your internal clock (even on weekends).

Toxins are all around us—in the food we eat, the air we breathe, and even the chemicals we clean with. Toxic load refers to the volume of toxic substances that have been accumulated in the body and the overall burden it places on bodily systems and vital organs.

When properly functioning, the body is an efficient toxic load–minimizing machine. The key is to do what you can to help by minimizing your exposure to toxins and supporting those vital organs through a healthy diet, exercise, and regular detoxification.

Tips
